Monthly review

October was marked by episodes of significant volatility in equity markets, although the scale of these developments may be partially obscured by the relatively orderly movements of major stock indices. There was no shortage of substantial corrections among large-cap companies. Alphabet, Google's parent company, Fortinet, a cybersecurity specialist, and Intel, the long-established U.S. semiconductor manufacturer, recorded single-day losses of 13%, 20%, and 28.5%, respectively, following the release of their quarterly results. These performances reflect investors' nervousness surrounding artificial intelligence, both in terms of its potential impact on the current organization of economic activity and the scale of investments required for its development, as well as the extent to which these investments will translate into future revenues and profits. Against this backdrop, it is encouraging to note the strong performance of the Leadersel Global Equity Walter Scott Fund. Thanks to the rigorous discipline applied in stock selection, the portfolio was able to minimize the impact of negative earnings surprises. Performance contributions were broad-based: technology was the only sector to post a negative return during the month, while all other sectors ended in positive territory, with double-digit gains in energy, financials, and consumer staples. Among the top contributors were Intuit, a developer of software solutions for small and medium-sized businesses; Cheniere Energy, a leading operator in energy infrastructure, particularly in liquefied natural gas (LNG); and Experian, the UK-based provider of credit risk analytics and information services. There were, of course, some negative performers, including the aforementioned Fortinet, whose decline was significant. Nevertheless, the ratio of advancing to declining holdings exceeded three to one, confirming a particularly positive month for the investment strategy adopted by the fund.

Investment objective

The sub-fund primarily invests in equity instruments denominated in euros, US dollars, and Asian currencies, targeting issuers located in the European Union, North America, and the Pacific region. Investments cover companies with varying market capitalizations and liquidity profiles and are diversified across all economic sectors. Currency risk is systematically hedged to eliminate the impact of exchange rate fluctuations. The main objective of the sub-fund is long-term capital appreciation (typically over an investment horizon exceeding five years) with a high risk profile. The investment philosophy is centered on fundamental analysis, both at the sector level and at the level of individual companies. Accordingly, investment decisions are based on research focused on earnings prospects, valuation metrics, cash flow analysis, and risk management. Portfolio management has been delegated to Walter Scott Partners Ltd., a Scottish asset management firm established in 1983, renowned for its strong track record in global equity markets.
